

New SafeMail® New York Mail Facility Enhances Mail Security Services To Prevent Mail Terrorism

Launch Combines SoBran's Mail Security Services Expertise with The Millennium Group's Mail Distribution Services Speed and Precision

NEW YORK and FAIRFAX, Virginia, September 19, 2011 – Today, The Millennium Group and SoBran, Inc. announce a state-of-the-art mail security service that will help keep Wall Street and all of the New York Metro Area business community safe from mail terrorism. The joint venture, SafeMail® New York, was established to respond to the FBI's mail security warnings regarding the potential for mail terrorism attacks by Al-Qaida, and other entities. This announcement comes as the nation solemnly commemorates the 10-year anniversary of the anthrax attacks that came just days after the 9/11 tragedy.

Mail and commercial deliveries, including freight, will be secured by SafeMail New York from Chemical, Biological, Radiological, Nuclear and Explosive (CBRNE) threats prior to delivery to a customer. SafeMail New York will be strategically located just outside of New York City to serve the financial heart of the U.S. The mail facility will also support commercial organizations from diverse industries across the New York Metro Region with the latest CBRNE detection equipment and advanced mail security services.

SafeMail New York combines the proven mail security services of SoBran with the mail distribution services acumen of The Millennium Group. SoBran has been at the forefront of mail security for the last decade, helping the Government Services Administration (GSA) to define mail security standards, and securing mail for clients such as the Department of Homeland Security. The Millennium Group is a leader in Office Services Facilities Management, and has been providing comprehensive document management services for 27 years to leading clients in every market segment across North America.

“SafeMail New York was driven by requests from our customers,” said Timothy Kerner, CMDSM, President of The Millennium Group. “Many organizations, including financial services firms, have already found they are more effective by outsourcing document management. Now, with this heightened need for security, their mail security services can also be handled by trusted experts.”

“From Wall Street to Main Street, organizations urgently want to ensure mail security for their employees and facilities”, said Amos Otis, founder and President of SoBran Inc. “SoBran was brought in after the anthrax attacks to help secure government mail. With SafeMail New York, companies will have access to the same level of mail security services as a critical component of their business continuity plans.”

The 75,000 square foot mail facility that will house SafeMail New York is already providing a full suite of document management solutions. SafeMail New York mail security services will be available in November. Visit <http://www.safemailNY.com> for more information.
